Happy Work Day

Wednesday July 13 was our last day to minister in Brazil and it was also the most exciting and happiest day because I saw God's amazing work. Even though we were busiest, we were also the happiest.

That morning we worked in a shopping mall in Belo Horizonte as planned. There was VBS program in the afternoon and a revival meeting at night. We asked our Heavenly Father to give us the opportunity to bear fruits. When we arrived on the top floor of the shopping center, we used two of the small rooms as free clinic where four doctors worked side by side. All of them began their work: Pastor Loo was an orthopedist, Mrs. Loo was an acupuncturist; and Peter and Michelle were dentists. We also jumped right in to share the gospel—when the patients were waiting to be seen; after they were seen by the doctors; when they were in the doctors' office; and when we led them outside to talk more at the food court. The results were very good. Not only were they weak physically, they were also weak spiritually. They need the Lord and therefore they came to seek the church's brothers and sisters. When we shared the gospel, we also shared our testimony. They were very willing to accept Christ as their personal savior. The Lord prepared their hearts for this amazing salvation. It is not just I who can have this opportunity, anyone who is willing to seek can identify their target for the gospel. When we are diligent in bringing people to Christ, we will reap a good harvest. I felt like the apostle Peter when he listened to the Lord's command to cast the net on the other side of the boat and was rewarded with so many fish. It is indeed beyond what we can imagine!

The same happened with the children ministry. There were a few more children came on this day and even though it got noisier in the food court, they still listened attentively. Through the singing of hymns, reciting Bible verses, crafts, my story of the Prodigal Son, as well as Ana using Portuguese to explain the truth about salvation. The children were all willing to go to Heaven.

The evening's gathering was for the brothers and sisters of the Chinese Baptist Church there. The songs and the message were catered to encourage and to renew them. We held hands to sing, to pray, and to ask for a revival of the church as well as for each of us to love Him and serve Him more.

Thank the Lord for giving us such a wonderful day, allowing us to have a bountiful end to our journey. May He receive all the glory!
